Let's take a look at this Sumerian deity. There is not much to say about it. We've all seen this deity mentioned on the internet about ancient aliens and the supposed matrix of fallen beings, ad infinitum. The author has recently looked at this clairvoyantly and has the following to say about this hybrid man-bird-fish-reptilian-etc-etc winged, elemental thing.

LOL “Don't thank the lizard, thank the Science behind it.” This is a story, at this point in time and until any other clairvoyants will corroborate or debate the finding it shall be this way. It was a story invented to prevent psychological or social disruption. Remind yourself that 9/10 times people generally project our world upon the ancients and not vice versa. For them it was not an issue whether this being was real or not. Maybe for us it would matter, but for them maybe it did not. Quite clearly we do not live in the ancient, pagan world of mystery and song and dance. Sumeria and even Babylonia were ones of many civilizations that have flourished. This is not to say that extra-terrestrial contact did not initiate their society at some time and place within their cycle. We would not profane the sacred.

Imagine the oratory connected to this deity's story! If you could only hear the orator! The clairvoyant can see the impression on the astral filament of the imparted sacredness of Apkallu or any of his inherited designations. As a critic of all things mundane, in our present time we see too much superstition in regards to "ancient aliens" rather than "ancient pagans and their ways of life" and with this reading, you can 95% be assured that this figure provided the Sumerian culture with a separation of church and state because this deity is not mortal. It is very much a dream of their day only minutely present in ours.

Piri Reis was an Ottoman admiral, geographer, and cartographer born between 1465 and 1470. There have been questions about the map that he created and how it was obtained. In contrast to the Oronce Finé map, Piri Reis, as the clairvoyant sees it, actually traveled to Antarctica and gathered his own data. Oronce Finé found a garbled Phoenician map in the Vatican archives and transposed it into something readable, but on the contrary Piri Reis has a more fabulous, interesting story to tell and the author genuinely believes that his spirit wants you to know it.

They went there themselves and surveyed Antarctica. They most likely had approximately two boats. There were cartographers on board and they had the wherewithal to do this mission. They possessed very clean, updated vessels. It was a very rugged and exasperating journey, but they said to their peers, "we're going to map the planet and if we don't return then you know we sunk, but we'll be back." About fifty people were with Piri Reis on board. You must understand that they were highly learned scholars and this trip was easy for them. The voyage was only a matter of power and not intellect or knowledge. He was indeed a remarkable cartographer by all means. They had Zoroastrian roots and were familiar with the Egyptians' knowledge. The trip took approximately three months' time.

The Oregon Vortex is a strange place. You can actually perceive yourself being a different size than normal. The occultist that visits this site, albeit a touristy place, wonders within himself/herself what is the actual cause of the vortex and are there any spirits or entities involved, etc.? The ATA clairvoyant has taken a precise look at this phenomenon on two occasions up until the time of this writing and here is what he says.

The Oregon Vortex is very, very deep. It has a bite to it. Do you know what is causing it? It's a vortex. That is what is causing it. It is amazing. It seems psychically dangerous to figure out. Speaking directly to the Vortex's spirit, he says, "I inhabit this region and I'm happy here." He/she/it is not incarnated though and he has atoms and a nucleus (if not in the modern sense, then at least in the occult/adept sense of the terms). What is important to note is that this is a vortex and that is the underlying fundamentality of its existence. It's akin to asking about a cloud, and its fundamental existence or cause. It's a cloud!

There are about 30 vortices on Earth if you count the Bermuda Triangle (it has its own properties we may get into at a later time). It makes you see yourself reflected. It's a dense, polar, magnetic vortex which is as natural as the wind itself—an aspect of nature. It creates lightning, storms, rain and visions of traumatic events. It can give you extrasensory perception and insight of the future—if you dare. It's a dense molecular field. From time to time, it shines!

The Saqqara Bird, a controversial figure of antiquity. No worries on this, friends. Let's take a look and see...

The keyword for this artifact is DYNAMIC. Now let us peruse the clairvoyance (how does it work, check NXXS.ORG for more information, thank you). The Egyptians of this era speak and say, "we have the concept for flight, but only models." They knew the rotors had to move fast. They (the priest/kings) searched for the knowledge of flight in the records. They actually did not know the technology themselves for flight, even though the hall of records had the instances of flying machines. This can be corroborated by the Abydos hieroglyphs that exist to this day, but assuredly there were more records available in the ancient times (even if it was the latter Egyptian period). They didn't see anything on exactly how to build airplanes whatsoever, because the ancient Egyptians did not possess them either. As far as NXXS is concerned, the priest-king of the Abydos hieroglyphs (of ancient flying machines) definitely did not possess the technology themselves and only witnessed it* but flight was in their dreams as a people and their wives and children were also in love with the idea.
